

We combine a personal atmosphere and individual support with high quality in teaching and research. Around 2,000 students from Germany and neighboring countries are currently studying at the Catholic University of Applied Sciences Freiburg (KH Freiburg). We are one of the »small« universities in Baden-Württemberg, but at the same time the »largest« in the fields of social sciences and health. This makes studying more personal, while demonstrating increased solidarity and opening up a variety of participation opportunities.

The Catholic University Freiburg is a state-recognized university under the auspices of the Catholic church. It is guided by the Christian image of human beings and stands for openness to the world, tolerance and solidarity.

Social Inclusion of Vulnerable Groups – in the Field of Social Science and Health Care Studies and Research

Dear guests and colleagues,

I warmly welcome you to this year's International Week at the Catholic University in Freiburg. I am very delighted that so many scientists, professionals and students from our partner universities from all parts of the world are taking part in our program. You all have come to share your knowledge, ideas and experiences with each other.

Together we will be working on solutions to an important local and global challenge: A number of groups within our societies face a higher risk of social exclusion and poverty compared to the general population. We will focus on this problem by applying an interdisciplinary perspective and we will also incorporate the knowledge of professionals who work with vulnerable and marginalised groups in the social sector and health care.

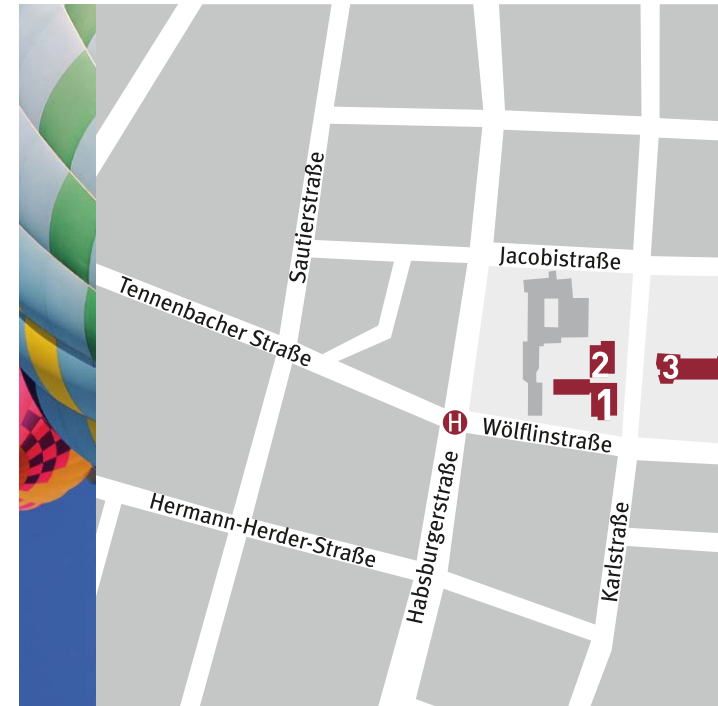

We will not only generate new knowledge and ideas on this topic, but we will also develop and maintain our relationships. In times of limitless digital communication, one of the advantages of this International Week lies in the opportunities for face-to-face encounters. I'm very much looking forward to meeting you all.

I wish us all an interesting and inspiring week.

Yours

Prof. Dr. Stephanie Bohlen
Rector
